NATURAL SCIENCE

TIME

PREMISE

Einstein's relativity showed that time does not pass at the same rate for every observer. The passage of time depends on motion and gravity.

QUESTION

If two observers can legitimately experience different amounts of elapsed time, what does it mean to say that an event happened "at the same time"?