NATURAL SCIENCE

THE ARROW OF TIME

PREMISE

Many fundamental physical laws work almost equally well forward and backward in time. Yet macroscopic processes have an obvious direction: eggs break, smoke disperses, and people age.

QUESTION

Why does time seem to have a direction if the underlying laws often don't?